Designers Should Code

“...being able to understand and bend within that scope [HTML & CSS constraints] is what makes a design feel native. Designers who work directly with the materials rather than through simulated environments like Photoshop are at a distinct advantage for making that happen.”

<https://signalvnoise.com/posts/1066-web-designers-should-do-their-own-htmlcss>

Designers Will Code

“We spend hours designing for a medium that’s interactive and responsive, but we start by producing mockups that are static and inflexible. If great design is not only aesthetics but also how it works, then it’s time to make development part of the creative process.”

Design Trends

“Trends and tendencies come and go, we all know that, it's part of our industry's business model ... With the web, the most common factor in change is due to updates in technology and as it evolves more things become possible in terms of layout.”

Flat Design

- Does not include elements of Skeuomorphism (design that emulates real life objects, textures or fabrics)
- Higher resolution screens make content look better, eliminating the need for embellishments
- Has a greater focus on the user, typography, content and color
- Return to minimalism and simplicity
- Non-traditional ways of showing depth and shadows
- Users are more familiar with technology, removing the need for real world metaphors
 - ex. Leather calendar textures, realistic page flips, etc.

We Value Fun Pretty Highly at Mozilla

"To make a long story slightly shorter, MailChimp passed a long and detailed list of requirements with flying colors. Most importantly, however, is that MailChimp makes all of this kinda fun, and we value fun pretty highly at Mozilla. We also like monkeys."

The screenshot displays the rdio website interface. On the left, there is a music player for the song "Oh Pretty Boy, You're Such a Big Boy" by Menomena. The player includes standard playback controls (play/pause, previous, next, volume, and shuffle) and a progress bar showing 2:45. Below the player is a promotional banner for a "Free trial period is ending in 3 days" with a "Subscribe" button.

The main content area is divided into two sections. The top section features an "Artists (254) a-z" dropdown menu with a scrollable list of artists. "Art Blakey & The Jazz Messengers" is currently selected and highlighted in blue. Below the list are alphabetical navigation tabs for A through Z.

The bottom section displays the "Songs (13)" for the selected artist, with a total duration of 81:11. The song list includes tracks such as "Along Came Betty", "Are You Real", "Blues March", "Come Rain Or Come Shine", "Moanin'", "The Drum Thunder Suite", and "Warm-Up and Dialogue Between Lee and Rudy". Each song entry includes a play button, the song title, the artist name, and a "Not Available" status with a plus-minus control.
